

Free Electricity to power your home

A Review by Stuart Bill

I must confess to being somewhat sceptical when offered the possibility of being able to generate free electricity at home. It is an attractive concept. It could save me a large amount of money every year. Also, I could do my bit to contribute towards the fight against global warming.

The idea is to build a machine (called a Zero point magnetic power generator) which uses magnetic power (remember how magnets attract and repel) in order to generate electricity. A fairly small generator produces enough electricity to replace around 30 to 50% of the power used in the average home. Just think how much money that would save you each year!

Of course, you can always implement a larger unit (or two small ones) to eradicate your electricity bill completely.

I was more than impressed with the fully illustrated manual that shows you exactly what you need and how to build and install the generator.

All the parts you need are commonly available from any good hardware store and together cost less than $100 to buy. I can confirm that you do not need to be a DIY genius in order to assemble the various parts - If you can hold a screwdriver, and follow step-by-step instructions, you can build this generator.

The machine can be completed by an absolute amateur in a couple of hours.

The finished machine is totally environmentally-friendly; it is quiet in use and it gives-off no gases or harmful chemicals, etc.

It takes up little space and is completely safe when 'running' - even with small children around.

The generator will run indefinitely, producing free electricity for life.

Unlike solar heating, or wind/water generators, a Zero Point generator is not reliant upon any outside source for its energy. It never stops when the sun goes down, or if the wind dies, or the river dries-up!

There are thousands of these generators in use, all around the world. The cost of the manual and the parts are covered within the first few months of savings. You can save yourself $thousands$ - and power cuts will be a thing of the past.

You are welcomed to read more about this amazing technology at DIY-Free-Electric * and see details of a specially reduced price.

It comes with a full, no-quibble money-back guarantee, so you have absolutely nothing to lose.

The writers even offer a FREE technical backup service, so that even if you hit a problem there is always someone there to help you out.

I cannot find anything about this product to complain about. I only wish we had been told about it years ago.

Stuart Bill.

* if clicking on link does not work, press Ctrl and click